

Imagine your friend tried very hard to get a medal on Sports Day at school. But , He / She came fourth in a race. Write a letter comforting her and saying that winning is not as important as participating.

Dear friend,

How are you? I heard that you just had Sports Day in school. I also heard that you ran in the 800-m race and came fourth. I know you are disappointed. As you had really practised hard to win a medal. But my dear, winning is not everything. Participating is what matters the most. The real winner is the one who always gets up and runs even after a fall.

I wish I was there to cheer you up. You are a great athlete. I promise I will be there on your next Sports Day to cheer you on. I know for sure , you are not the type who will give up after one setback. So here 's wishing you better luck next time.

Yours faithfully,

XYZ.
